

THIRTY-TWO INJURED IN SOUTHERN WRECK

Washington and Chattanooga Limited
Thrown Over Embankment
by Defective Rail.

EVERYBODY ESCAPED SERIOUS HURT

Wreckage Caught Fire and Only the Express Was Left by the Flames—
Train was Full of People and It is Remarkable That There Were No
Deaths.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., Sept. 23.—Southern Railway passenger train No. 42, northbound, known as the Washington and Chattanooga Limited, due here at 5:22 a. m., was wrecked at daybreak yesterday morning within sight of Oak Ridge Station, thirty miles south of Charlottesville, in a manner strikingly like the wreck of No. 34, on the same railway, near Red Hill, on the morning of August 26.

In both cases the derailment took place in a cut which protected the coaches from turning over, and with in 100 yards of a high embankment, and in each case no one was killed, and the injuries were comparatively slight. Thirty-two passengers were injured.

A Defective Rail.

The wreck this morning, as in the case of No. 34, was due to the breaking of a defective rail, which threw off the track all of the train, consisting of three Pullmans, two day coaches and one express car. The engine remained on the track, and the tender was half derailed. The train was broken at two points. The express car was thrown against the low bank at the northern end of the cut. A hundred feet farther back were the three Pullmans, two of which were entirely off the roadbed and leaning against the bank, and the third off the rails, but upright. Some yards still farther back were the two day coaches tilted against the bank. These coaches were further off the track than the others. Some distance behind the wreck was the broken rail, and other rails between it and the debris were broken from the ties.

The wreckage was soon afire. Flames were first discovered in the front Pullman, China, and spread rapidly, the other two sleepers, Sapphire and Sandino, being the next to go, and then the two day coaches. Of the entire train only the engine and express car remained unburned. The wrecking train which left this city at 6:4 o'clock, had taken to the scene 150 feet of hose, but nothing effective was done to check the fire.

No One Killed.
It is little short of marvelous that there were no deaths. Indeed, only one person was very painfully injured. This was Conductor George E. Smith, of Alexandria, who was thrown violently forward and fell across the back of a seat in the day coach on the rear of the train. He was badly wrenched, and it is feared was injured internally. He was brought to this city at 10 o'clock and taken to the University of Virginia Hospital. Other passengers received slight injuries, but continued on their journey.

If the wreck had occurred one hundred feet further on, the train would have gone down a high embankment, with results too horrible to contemplate, as the train was well filled, there being hardly a vacant berth in either of the three sleepers.

Dr. Edward M. Magruder, the company's physician, and other doctors who went to the wreck had little to do. The passengers were brought to Charlottesville, where a train was made, and they were forwarded North by it, leaving here about 11 o'clock.

In Night Attire.

Of course, the shaking up was very general, and produced some fright, especially among the lady passengers; but there was little exhibition of symptoms of panic. One lady, the daughter of a Tennessee Congressman, got out of the debris in some way, and in the uncertain morning light appeared on the railroad side ungarbed, except for a union suit. Many other passengers lost their belongings. One woman's jewels disappeared, a gentleman lost his watch and fob, and another his pocketbook containing $250. Some male passengers were indebted to others for the wherewithal to cover their nakedness. In this respect, the ladies seemed to have suffered less, but one came into Charlottesville without any shoes, and was unable to procure any foot wear this side of Washington. As she was bound for Pittsburgh, she was much concerned about her appearance in the capital city, where it would become necessary to change cars.

Everything that could be done for the comfort of the passengers was done. The ladies were served with coffee sent over from the residence of Thomas Fortune Ryan, at "Oak Ridge," and a more serious need of food was supplied when the dining car arrived as a part of the train from Charlottesville. A half hour after the wreck a thunderstorm ushered in the equinox, forcing the passengers to seek shelter at the little country station.

THE WOES OF WILLIE.

The year had gloomily begun
For Willie Weeks, a poor man's Sun.
He was beset with bill and dun,
And he had very little Mon.
"This cash," said he, "won't pay dues,
I've nothing here but ones and Tues."
A bright thought struck him, and he said,
"The rich Miss Goldrocka I will Wed."
But when he paid his court to her,
She slipped, but firmly said, "No, Thur."
"Alas!" said he, "then I must die,
His soul went where they say souls fly Fri.
They found his gloves and coat and hat,
And the coroner then upon them Sat.
—P. H. Leonard in Puck.

It Distressed Him.

"Doesn't it distress you, Mr. Wawhaws, when you notice how much the current slang phrases seem to appeal to so many people nowadays instead of good, pure English?"
"It does, for a fact! Looks like they had the dictionaries skinned a mile!"
—Browning's.

A Baffled Plot.

George wanted to make it disagreeable for the unpopular aunt who was coming to visit them and hired a hand organ man to play in front of the house all the afternoon on the day she arrived. When he came home at night his wife met him at the door.
"George, there was a hand organ man playing in front of the house all the afternoon. I tried to drive him away, and he wouldn't go. It was really dreadful."
George chuckled.
"And how did aunt like it?"
"Auntie! Why, she couldn't hear a sound. She's grown so awfully deaf, you know."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"At" and "Across."

Dissenting from the opinion of most of his fellow countrymen, Professor John Lester, an English speaker at a meeting of the Friends' Educational association in Philadelphia, declared that the manners of boys in the United States were better than those of English lads. This he held was due to the influence of American mothers and women teachers in our schools.
"The American boy," said Professor Lester, "learns his first lessons in morality at his mother's knee. The English boy generally learns his across his father's."—Woman's Home Companion.

Would Have a Long Wait.

"Bring in some ice water, Bridget, and put a large piece of ice in the pitcher," said a lady to her recently engaged servant. After waiting twenty minutes the lady called for Bridget to inquire why it took so long to bring in the ice water.
"Shure, ma'am," replied Bridget, "the big lump of ice ain't melted yet."
—New York Press.

A Safe Guess.

Rector—I see by the report you hand in that Job Jones, who is starving and out of work, has ten children. Have you been there to visit them?
Curate—No, sir.
Rector—Then how do you know about his family?
Curate—Starving and out of employment always have ten, doctor.—Harpers Weekly.

Extremes.

"See, Larry, the man at the other table is a swell. He orders extremities."
"Extremities?"
"Yes, he ordered frogs' legs."
"Bedad, thin O'll order extremities too."
"But you can't afford frogs' legs."
"No, but O'll order pigs' fate."—Detroit Tribune.

The Order Granted.

"To went down on his hands and knees and prayed God to strike his hands off if he struck me with them again. Since then he has been doing it with his head and feet."
Such was the story of Mary Turner at Preston when applying for a separation order against her husband. The order was granted.—London Mail.

His Obligations.

"I freely admit," remarked Mr. Meekton, "that I owe everything to my wife."
"And she occasionally reminds you of the fact?"
"Well, I must admit that she isn't the easiest creature in the world."—Washington Star.

And He Succeeded.

"Beg pardon, sir," said the waiter, with outstretched palm, "but 'aven't you forgotten something?"
"No," replied the departing guest, "but I'm trying to forget it. Good day!"—Catholic Standard and Times.

Pretty Fair Advice.

Mrs. Benham—You should say nothing but good of the dead.
Benham—That doesn't mean that you should say nothing but bad of the living.—New York Press.
